With the help of thousands of volunteers each year, Appalachia Service Project repairs homes free of charge for families in Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia.

If you are in need of home repair, repair work will be performed by high school volunteers and their adult leaders from church and school groups from all over the country. Volunteers work for one week at a time in the spirit of love and commitment to improving our world. If ASP agrees to work on your home, crews of about seven (7) people at a time will work on your home for one to eight weeks, depending on the work.
